WE PROTECT COMPANIES AND PROFESSIONALS IN THE MARITIME AND TRANSPORT LOGISTICS INDUSTRY FROM CYBER ATTACK LOSSES.

Cyber risks are some of the largest and most dynamic threats facing the maritime and transport logistics industry today. With automated and digital systems at the heart of global trade, the impact of a cyber attack can be wide-ranging and cause significant financial loss.

Unauthorised use of a freight forwarder's logistic planning system, the exploitation of goods tracking systems, the introduction of ransomware at a shipping company and the disruption of ship navigation systems are all examples of marine and transport logistics related cyber crimes with the potential for material financial consequences for clients, suppliers and the business involved.

At Chaucer, our Marine PI and Transport Logistics team works in partnership with the cyber team to deliver industry specific solutions, which respond to the cyber risks clients confront. In clear and comprehensive language, our policies provide tailored and dependable cyber solutions, including business interruption coverage, and access to a global network of cyber security specialists who are on hand to help you restore systems, navigate any legal and regulatory implications and to minimise the financial impact.

We write a worldwide account through Lloyd's and Chaucer Dublin, our insurance company in Ireland. We accept business from both Lloyd's and non-Lloyd's brokers.

FLEXIBLE CYBER COVERAGE

We provide a flexible cyber policy, which includes a combined single liability limit allowing you to portion the cover you buy between a broad range of potential expenses and liabilities. This means you can tailor coverage to your individual business needs.

Our cyber policy covers the cost to your business of mitigating the damage caused by a security incident, including:

- Actions necessary to restore network availability and guarantee integrity
- A forensic investigation to find out exactly what happened to your computers and who was responsible for it
- Management of ransomware payments where hackers hold data hostage or threaten attack
- Legal costs, particularly if protected information was involved in the data breach, to notify clients that their information was compromised or to help resolve with regulatory issues
- Public relations support to restore any damage caused by the breach

In addition, our cyber policy covers the cost to your business of any third party liability arising from an incident, including:

- Where a security gap in your software allows a virus to infect client systems
- Any misdirection of business funds, data and/or confidential information
- Protection from infringement of intellectual property, breach of confidentiality or right to privacy, and breach of comparative advertising regulations
- Business Interruption cover to compensate your business for income that it is not able to earn while it deals with the fallout of the security incident
